SECTION VI - RISK DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

40. Generic Risk Disclosure Statement for Shares and Bonds

40.1. Shares

A share is an instrument representing a shareholder's rights in a company. Shares may be issued in bearer or registered form and may be certificated or non-certificated. One share represents a fraction of a corporation's share capital. Dividend payments and an increase in the value of the security are both possible, although not guaranteed. The shareholder has financial and ownership rights which are determined by law and the issuing company's articles of association. Unless otherwise provided, transfers of bearer shares do not entail any formalities. However, transfers of registered shares are often subject to limitations.

Dealing in shares may involve risks including but not limited to the following:

- (a) Company risk: a share purchaser does not lend funds to the company, but becomes a co-owner of the corporation. He or she thus participates in its development as well as in chances for profits and losses, which makes it difficult to forecast the precise yield on such an investment. An extreme case would be if the company went bankrupt, thereby wiping out the total sums invested.
- (b) Price risk: share prices may undergo unforeseeable price fluctuations causing risks of loss. Price increases and decreases in the short-, medium- and long-term alternate without it being possible to determine the duration of those cycles. General market risk must be distinguished from the specific risk attached to the company itself. Both risks, jointly or in aggregate, influence share prices.
- (c) Dividend risk: the dividend per share mainly depends on the issuing company's earnings and on its dividend policy. In case of low profits or losses, dividend payments may be reduced or not made at all.

41. Bonds

Bonds are negotiable debt instruments issued in bearer or registered form by a company or a government body to creditors and whose par value at issuance represents a fraction of the total amount of the debt. The duration of the debt as well as the terms and conditions of repayment are determined in advance. Unless stipulated otherwise, the bond is repaid either at the maturity date, or by means of annual payments, or at different rates determined by drawing lots. The interest payments on bonds may be either (i) fixed for the entire duration or (ii) variable and often linked to reference rates (e.g. FIBOR or LIBOR). The purchaser of a bond (the creditor) has a claim against the issuer (the debtor).

Dealing in bonds may involve risks including but not limited to the following:

- (a) Insolvency risk: the issuer may become temporarily or permanently Insolvent, resulting in its incapacity to repay the interest or redeem the bond. The solvency of an issuer may change due to one or more of a range of factors including the issuing company, the issuer's economic sector and/or the political and economic status of the countries concerned. The deterioration of the issuer's solvency will influence the price of the securities that it issues.
- (b) Interest rate risk: uncertainty concerning interest rate movements means that purchasers of fixed-rate securities carry the risk of a fall in the prices of the securities if interest rates rise. The longer the duration of the loan and the lower the interest rate, the higher a bond's sensitivity to a rise in the market rates.
- (c) Credit risk: the value of a bond will fall in the event of a default or reduced credit rating of the issuer. Generally, the higher the relative rate of interest (that is, relative to the interest rate on a risk-free security of similar maturity and interest rate structure), the higher the perceived credit risk of the issuer.
- (d) Early redemption risk: the issuer of a bond may include a provision allowing early redemption of the bond if market interest rates fall. Such early redemption may result in a change to the expected yield.
- (e) Risks specific to bonds redeemable by drawing: bonds redeemable by drawing have a maturity that is difficult to determine, so unexpected changes in the yield on these bonds may occur.
- (f) Risks specific to certain types of bond: additional risks may be associated with certain types of bond, for example floating rate notes, reverse floating rate notes, zero coupon bonds, foreign currency bonds, convertible bonds, reverse convertible notes, indexed bonds, and subordinated bonds. For such bonds, the Customer is advised to make inquiries about the risks referred to in the issuance prospectus and not to purchase such securities before being certain that all risks are fully understood. In the case of subordinated bonds, the Customer is advised to enquire about the ranking of the debenture compared to the issuer's other debentures. Indeed, if the issuer becomes bankrupt, those bonds will only be redeemed after repayment of all higher ranked creditors and as such there is a risk that the Customer will not be reimbursed. In the case of reverse convertible notes, there is a risk that the Customer will not be entirely reimbursed, but will receive only an amount equivalent to the underlying securities at maturity.

42. Generic Risk Disclosure Statement for OTC Derivative, Structured Note and Warrant Transactions

- 42.1. In common with many other financial transactions, over-the-counter ("OTC") derivative, structured note and warrant transactions, in addition to providing significant benefits, may involve a variety of significant risks. OTC derivatives include options, forwards, swaps, swaptions, caps, floors, collars, combinations and variations of such transactions, and other contractual arrangements. Structured notes include debt or depository instruments having economic features similar to one or more OTC derivative transactions and warrants are securitised options. OTC derivative, structured note and warrant transactions may all involve or be based upon interest rates, currencies, securities, commodities, and other underlying interests.
- 42.2. Before entering into any OTC derivative, structured note or warrant transaction, the Customer should carefully consider whether the transaction is appropriate for the Customer in light of the Customer's objectives, experience, financial and operational resources, and other relevant circumstances. The Customer should also ensure that the Customer fully understand the nature of the transaction and contractual relationship into which the Customer is entering and the nature and extent of the Customer's exposure to risk of loss, which may significantly exceed the amount of any initial payment by or to the Customer.
- 42.3. The specific risks presented by a particular OTC derivative, structured note or warrant transaction necessarily depend upon the terms of that transaction and the Customer's circumstances. In general, however, all OTC derivative, structured note and warrant transactions involve risks, which include (among others) the risk of adverse or unanticipated market, financial, or political developments, risk of counterparty or issuer default and other credit and enforcement risks, and risk of illiquidity and related risks. In addition, the Customer may be subject to operational risks in the event that the Customer does not have in place appropriate internal systems and controls to monitor the various risks, funding and other requirements to which the Customer may be subject by virtue of the Customer's activities in OTC derivatives, structured notes and warrants, and other financial markets.

- 42.4. OTC derivative, structured note and warrant transactions permit precise customisation to accomplish particular financial and risk management objectives that might otherwise be unachievable. Customisation can, however, introduce significant liquidity risk and other risk factors of a complex character.
- 42.5. As in any financial transaction, the Customer should ensure that it understands the requirements (including investment restrictions), if any, applicable to it that are established by its regulators or by its board of directors or other governing body. The Customer should also consider the legal, tax and accounting implications of entering into any OTC derivative, structured note or warrant transaction. To the extent appropriate in light of the specific OTC derivative, structured note or warrant transaction, and the Customer's particular circumstances, it should consider consulting such advisers as may be appropriate to assist it in understanding the risks involved. If the Customer is acting in the capacity of financial adviser, agent or fiduciary the Customer should evaluate the foregoing matters in light of the circumstances applicable to the Customer's client or principal and any obligations or limitations imposed on the Customer as adviser, agent or fiduciary.
- 42.6. In entering into any OTC derivative, structured note, or warrant transaction with, or arranged by, CS or any of its affiliates (collectively "CS"), the Customer should also understand that CS is acting solely in the capacity of an arm's length contractual counterparty and not in the capacity of its financial adviser or fiduciary unless CS has so agreed in writing and then only to the extent so provided. Whether or not the Customer and CS have established a written financial advisory or fiduciary relationship, CS may from time to time have substantial long or short positions in, and may make a market in or otherwise buy or sell instruments identical or economically related to, the OTC derivative, structured note, or warrant transaction entered into with the Customer; CS may also have an investment banking, corporate advisory, or other commercial relationship with the issuer of any security or financial instrument underlying the OTC derivative, structured note or warrant transaction entered into with the Customer.

THIS BRIEF STATEMENT DOES NOT PURPORT TO DISCLOSE ALL OF THE RISKS OR OTHER RELEVANT CONSIDERATIONS OF ENTERING INTO OTC DERIVATIVE, STRUCTURED NOTE, OR WARRANT TRANSACTIONS. THE CUSTOMER SHOULD REFRAIN FROM ENTERING INTO ANY SUCH TRANSACTION UNLESS THE CUSTOMER FULLY UNDERSTANDS ALL SUCH RISKS AND HAVE INDEPENDENTLY DETERMINED THAT THE TRANSACTION IS APPROPRIATE FOR THE CUSTOMER.

42.7. Emerging Markets Risk Disclosure Statement

This Risk Disclosure Statement is intended to inform investors of the uncertainties and risks associated with investments and transactions in various types of products (equities, fixed income, derivatives, currencies, commodities, loan obligations and other contracts) ("Instruments") of, or related or linked to, issuers and obligors incorporated, based or principally engaged in business in emerging markets countries. The risks of investing in Instruments linked to these countries are magnified because of, among other things, political uncertainties and the relative instability of their developing financial markets and economies. Moreover, many emerging markets countries do not have fully developed or clear legal, judicial, regulatory or settlement infrastructures. Consequently, making investments in or with respect to these markets and Instruments involves significant risks that may not be present in or with respect to more developed markets. This Risk Disclosure Statement is intended to summarise some of the investment risks present in investing in emerging markets Instruments but, of course, cannot disclose all possible risks of buying and selling such Instruments.

Investments in emerging markets Instruments should be made only by sophisticated investors or experienced professionals who have independent knowledge of the relevant markets, are able to consider and weigh the various risks presented by such instruments, and have the financial resources necessary to bear the substantial risk of loss of investment in such Instruments.

42.8. Emerging Markets

Countries with emerging markets include, but are not limited to (1) countries that have an emerging stock market in a developing economy as defined by the International Finance Corporation, (2) countries that have low to middle income economies according to the World Bank, and (3) countries listed in World Bank publications as developing. The list of emerging markets countries is subject to continuous change; broadly they include any country other than Austria, Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Hong Kong, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Singapore, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States of America.

42.9. Types of Instruments

There are various types of emerging markets equity and debt Instruments (including sovereign loans and loan participations.) In many cases, these Instruments may not be registered with local governments and may be privately placed or not listed on exchanges. Some types of emerging markets Instruments are listed as follows:

Equity	Fixed Income	Derivatives
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • American Depositary Receipts and Shares (ADRs/ADSs) • European Depositary Receipts (EDRs) and Global Depositary Receipts and Shares (GDRs/GDSs) • Common stock and ordinary shares other • Convertible securities • Preferred stock indices • Rights debt • Units • Warrants • Exchangeable securities and vouchers 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Bonds • Brady bonds • Pre-Brady loans • Currencies • Debentures • Eurobonds • Mortgages • Structured Notes and other debt • Sovereign debt (loans) • Trade receivables 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Futures • Swaps and Swaptions • Caps, floors and, collars • Options on Brady bonds or Instruments • Options on securities and • Structured Notes and other instruments

42.10. Event Risk

On occasion, a country or region will suffer an unforeseen catastrophic event (for example, a natural disaster) which causes disturbances in its financial markets, including rapid movements in its currency, that will affect the value of Instruments in, or which relate to, that country. Furthermore, the value of Instruments and any income derived therefrom can be affected by global events, including events (political, economic or otherwise) occurring in a country other than that in which the Instruments are issued or traded.

42.11. Political Risk

Many emerging markets countries are undergoing, or have undergone in recent years, significant political change which has affected government policy, including the regulation of industry, trade, financial markets and foreign and domestic investment. The relative inexperience with such policies and instability of these political systems leaves them more vulnerable to economic hardship, public unrest or popular dissatisfaction with reform, political or diplomatic developments, social, ethnic, or religious instability or changes in government policies. Such circumstances, in turn, could lead to a reversal of some or all political reforms, a backlash against foreign investment, and possibly even a turn away from a market-orientated economy. For investors, the results may include confiscatory taxation, exchange controls, compulsory reacquisition, nationalisation or expropriation of foreign-owned assets without adequate compensation or the restructuring of particular industry sectors in a way that could adversely affect investments in those sectors. Any perceived, actual or expected disruptions or changes in government policies of a country, by elections or otherwise, can have a major impact on the value of Instruments linked to those countries.

42.12. Economic Risk

The economics of emerging markets countries are by their nature in early or intermediate stages of economic development, and therefore more vulnerable to rising interest rates and inflation. In fact, in many countries, high interest and inflation rates are the norm. Rates of economic growth, corporate profits, domestic and international flows of funds, external and sovereign debt, dependence on international trade, and sensitivity to world commodity prices play key roles in economic development, yet vary greatly from country to country. Businesses and governments in these countries may have a limited history of operating under market conditions. Accordingly, when compared to more developed countries, businesses and governments of emerging markets countries are relatively inexperienced in dealing with market conditions and have a limited capital base from which to borrow funds and develop their operations and economies. In addition, the lack of an economically feasible tax regime in certain countries poses the risk of sudden imposition of arbitrary or excessive taxes, which could adversely affect foreign investors. Furthermore, many emerging markets countries lack a strong infrastructure and banks and other financial institutions may not be well-developed or well regulated. All of the above factors, among others, can affect the proper functioning of the economy and have a corresponding adverse effect on the performance of Instruments linked to a particular market.

42.13. Credit Risk

Emerging markets sovereign and corporate debt tends to be riskier than sovereign and corporate debt in established markets. Issuers and obligors of debt in these countries are more likely to be unable to make timely coupon or principal, payments, thereby causing the underlying debt or loan to go into default. The sovereign debt of some countries is currently in technical default and there are no guarantees that such debt will eventually be restructured (possibly in a Brady bond-like arrangement) allowing for a more liquid market in that debt. The measure of a company's or government's ability to repay its debt affects not only the market for that particular debt but Instruments related to that company or country.

Additionally, evaluating credit risk for foreign bonds involves greater uncertainty because credit rating agencies throughout the world have different standards, making comparisons across countries difficult. Many debt Instruments are simply unrated and may already be in default or considered distressed, there is often less publicly available business and financial information about foreign issuers than those in developed countries. Furthermore, foreign companies are often not subject to uniform accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards. Also, some emerging markets countries may have accounting standards that bear little or no resemblance to, or may not even be reconcilable with, US generally accepted accounting principles.

42.14. Currency Risk

Many emerging markets Instruments are denominated in foreign currencies. The weakening of a country's currency relative to the US dollar or other benchmark currencies will negatively affect the dollar value of an Instrument denominated in that currency. Currency valuations are linked to a host of economic, social and political factors and can fluctuate greatly, even during intra-day trading. It is important to note that some countries have foreign exchange controls which may include the suspension of the ability to exchange or transfer currency, or the devaluation of the currency. Hedging can increase or decrease the exposure to any one currency, but may not eliminate completely exposure to changing currency values.

42.15. Market Risk

The emerging equity and debt markets of many emerging markets countries, like their economies, are in the early stages of development. These financial markets generally lack the level of transparency, liquidity, efficiency and regulation found in more developed markets. It is important, therefore, to be familiar with secondary market trading in emerging markets Instruments and the terminology and conventions applicable to transactions in these markets.

Price volatility in many of these markets can be extreme. Price discrepancies can be common and market dislocation is not uncommon. Additionally, as news about a country becomes available, the financial markets may react with dramatic upswings and/or downswings in prices during a very short period of time. These markets also might not have regulations governing manipulation and insider trading or other provisions designed to 'level the playing field' with respect to the availability of information and the use or misuse thereof in such markets. It may be difficult to employ certain risk management practices for emerging markets Instruments, such as forward currency exchange contracts, stock options, currency options, stock and stock index options, futures contracts and options on futures contracts.

42.16. Liquidity/Gapping Risk

Liquidity of an Instrument is directly affected by the supply and demand for that Instrument. As the supply of potential sellers increases or demand by potential buyers decreases, or both, liquidity of the Instrument will decrease and bid/offer spreads will generally widen. On some instruments, because of their structure, liquidity is affected by the costs of unwinding an imbedded transaction. Natural disasters and economic, social, and political developments in a country can cause a decrease in the liquidity of investments related to that country, thereby making it difficult to sell promptly at an acceptable price. In addition, the failure, pending failure or financial difficulties of an entity holding significant positions in certain types of Instruments may trigger a decrease in the liquidity and value of the same or similar type of Instruments. The sale of instruments, including illiquid Instruments, could also be subject to legal restrictions in some countries.

42.17. Regulatory/Legal Risk

In emerging markets countries there is generally less government supervision and regulation of business and industry practices, stock exchanges, over-the-counter markets, brokers, dealers and issuers than in more developed countries. Whatever supervision is in place may be subject to manipulation or control. Many countries have mature legal systems comparable to those of more developed countries, while others do not. The process of regulatory and legal reform may not proceed at the same pace as market developments, which could result in confusion and uncertainty and, ultimately, increased investment risk. Legislation to safeguard the rights of private ownership may not yet be in place in certain areas, and there may be the risk of conflict among local, regional and national requirements. In certain areas, the laws and regulations governing investments in securities may not exist or may be subject to inconsistent or arbitrary application or interpretation and may be changed with retroactive effect. Both the independence of judicial systems and their immunity from economic, political or nationalistic influences remain largely untested in many countries. Judges and courts in many countries are generally inexperienced in the areas of business and corporate law. Companies are exposed to the risk that legislatures will revise established law solely in response to economic or political pressure or popular discontent. There is no guarantee that a foreign investor would obtain a satisfactory remedy in local courts in case of a breach of local laws or regulations or a dispute over ownership of assets. An investor may also encounter difficulties in pursuing legal remedies or in obtaining and enforcing judgments in foreign courts.

42.18. Trade Settlement, Processing and Clearing

Many emerging markets have different clearance and settlement procedures from those in more developed countries. For many emerging markets Instruments, there is no central clearing mechanism for settling trades and no central depository or custodian for the safe keeping of securities. Custodians can include domestic and foreign custodian banks and depositaries, among others. The registration, recordkeeping and transfer of Instruments may be carried out manually, which may cause delays in the recording of ownership. Where applicable, CS will settle trades in emerging markets Instruments in accordance with the current market practice developed for such transactions by the Emerging Markets Traders Association. Otherwise, the transaction may be settled in accordance with the practice and procedure (to the extent applicable) of the relevant market. There are times when settlement dates are extended, and during the interim the market value of an Instrument may change. Moreover, certain markets have experienced times when settlements did not keep pace with the volume of transactions resulting in settlement difficulties. Because of the lack of standardised settlement procedures, settlement risk is more prominent than in more mature markets. In addition, the Customer may be subject to operational risks if the Customer do not have in place appropriate internal systems and controls to monitor the various risks, funding and other requirements to which the Customer may be subject by virtue of its activities with respect to emerging market Instruments.

42.19. Bondholder/Shareholder Risk

Rules in emerging markets countries regulating the ownership and corporate governance of companies (for example, requiring the disclosure of large ownership positions or governing tender offers by majority shareholders) may not exist or may provide little protection to bondholders and shareholders. Disclosure and reporting requirements in general, from annual and quarterly reports to prospectus content and delivery, may be minimal or non-existent. Antifraud and insider trading law is generally not very developed in many emerging markets countries. There may be no prohibitions or restrictions under local law on the ability of management to terminate existing business operations, sell or dispose of assets, or otherwise materially affect the value of the company without the consent of its shareholders. Anti dilution protection may also be very limited. There may be no fiduciary duty, or a limited concept of fiduciary duty, on the part of management or the directors to the company or to the shareholders as a whole or minority shareholders. Remedies for violations of shareholders' rights may be difficult to obtain because of the absence of a system of derivative or class action litigation.

42.20. Risks in General

The nature and extent of investment risks described above may vary from country to country and Instrument to Instrument. Many of these risks overlap, are correlated or related to one another, or are subsets of more general risks. These investment risks will vary with:

- the type of investment being made
- the needs and objectives of particular investors
- the manner in which a particular investment is made or a specific Instrument is offered, sold or traded
- the location or domicile of the issuer
- the diversification or concentration in a portfolio (e.g., the amount invested in any one currency, security, country or issuer)
- the complexity of the transaction and the use of leverage.

42.21. Conclusion

Investments in Instruments related to emerging markets countries may be considered speculative, and their prices will be much more volatile than those in the more developed countries of the world. It is each customer's responsibility to manage the risks which arise as a result of investing in emerging markets Instruments and the allocation of assets in its portfolio. The risks set forth herein individually or in the aggregate, as well as other factors, could have a material adverse effect on the Customer's investment. This Risk Disclosure Statement is not intended to be an exhaustive list of all the risk factors affecting emerging markets Instruments. The Customer should seek advice from its own advisers with regard to tax, accounting and other factors to be considered when investing in an emerging markets Instrument.

Before making any investment in an emerging markets Instrument, the Customer should independently satisfy itself that it understands and appreciates the significance of the relevant risks, and that such an investment is appropriate and suitable for the Customer or its managed accounts in light of its objectives, experience, financial and operational resources, and other relevant circumstances. The Customer should also ensure that it fully understands the nature of the transaction and contractual relationship into which the Customer is entering and the nature and extent of its exposure to risk of Loss, which may significantly exceed the amount of any initial payment by or to the Customer. CS assumes that if the Customer is acting as an investment adviser or fiduciary for its customer, that its customer is aware of the risks and practices described herein, and that prior to each transaction the Customer has determined that such transaction is suitable for its customer. The Customer should understand that when conducting transactions in emerging market Instruments, CS is acting solely in the capacity of an arm's length counterparty and not in the capacity of the Customer's financial adviser unless otherwise agreed in writing.

Under no circumstances should this Risk Disclosure Statement be construed as investment advice or be used or considered as an offer to sell, or a solicitation of any offer to buy, any emerging markets Instrument. While CS may from time to time make a market in an emerging markets Instrument, it does not commit to make a market in any Instrument and provides no guarantee that a market in an Instrument will exist at the time an investor seeks to buy or sell such Instrument. CS or a related entity may from time to time have long or short positions in and buy and sell Instruments referred to herein. CS or a related entity may also from time to time perform investment banking or other services for, or solicit investment banking or other business from, any issuer located in an emerging markets country or any government of an emerging markets country.

43. Tax

CS does not provide tax advice or opinion on any transaction nor on the tax risks of any transaction and the Customer is advised to ensure that it has taken its own advice, including (where appropriate) from an independent tax adviser, to enable the Customer to satisfy itself as to the tax implications of any transaction.
